

Abstract

An all-optical data compression system comprising:

an input encoding unit having at least one input for receiving a data channel; an output decoding unit having at least one output for providing a data channel; a radiation guide for carrying encoded optical data signals from the encoding unit to the decoding unit, and the encoded optical data signals are in a form of a train of optical pulses equally separated by a time interval and having relative phase shifts between adjacent pulses.